TRANSIT HUB TAKES SHAPE

JOHN VANBEEKUM/FOR THE MIAMI HERALD

Sheet metal worker Jamie Radcliff polishes one of the stainless steel planters Thursday on the fourth-floor customer service lobby of the Miami Intermodal Center's Rental Car Center. The rental car area is scheduled to open in spring 2010. The Miami Intermodal Center is a major hub that eventually will link several modes of transportation, including Metrorail, Tri-Rail, perhaps high-speed rail, urban and interstate buses and rental cars, with Miami International Airport. The $1.7-billion hub is being built just east of MIA and will be connected to the airport via an automated train to be called MIA Mover. Construction, overseen by the Florida Department of Transportation, is expected to be completed by late 2012. For more info, go to <http://www.micdot.com/>.
