TRANSPORTATION UPDATE: The local district of the Florida Department of Transportation's $3 billion-plus five-year work plan has shrunk by $60.4 million as "funding challenges" continue, district Secretary Gus Pego told the Miami-Dade Metropolitan Planning Organization. About $2.3 billion is to be spent on construction and public transportation investments. Fifty-three projects are ongoing in the district, totaling $2.16 billion, Mr. Pego said, including a rental car center near Miami International Airport — set for a May opening — and the long-planned Port of Miami tunnels. Tunnel groundbreaking is expected in about seven months.
