Work begins tomorrow on multi-modal hub in Florida

Construction of South Florida's first complete ground transportation hub will begin tomorrow, 27 September, when Florida Department of Transportation Secretary Ananth Prasad joins local officials and representatives of Amtrak, Greyhound, Miami-Dade Transit Metrorail and Metrobus and Tri-Rail for a "shovelling of dirt" ceremony launching the final component of the massive US$2 billion Miami intermodal centre programme.

When completed in 2013, the Miami Central Station will provide first-ever linkage between all forms of ground transportation existing in South Florida and it will connect them to Miami International Airport via the recently opened MIA Mover train.
